Rev. Carl Kingsbury, Andover Congregational Church, has sent out letters this week in regard to the Christian Educational Building. He noted that this building has been nearly completed and is being used by Sunday School, public school and church related organizations. He went on to say that people from other parts of the state marvel at what the people of Andover have done.

At present the basement is not finished, so that the young people may have a place for recreation, due to lack of money.

A financial report was given. To date the amount of $15,000 has been spent and a sum of $4,377.00 is owed and to finish the necessary work it will take another $1,000.00. It would be necessary to raise approximately $2,305.00.

Rev. Kingsbury hopes "that you will assist in finishing and thereby furnishing the young people a place where they may have wholesome recreation that will keep Andover a good town to live in."

Contributions can be sent to Mrs. Anne Fox or Donald French and earmark the donation "for the Building Fund". He then thanked everyone for their help in the past and hoped that they would help to finish the building.

becca Farrington is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Roger Carrier and children in South Coventry, Conn.

CAMPERS WARNED OF DANGERS IN FAULTY HEATING EQUIPMENT

The Division of Sanitary Engineering of the State Department of Health and Welfare is issuing urgent warnings to all campers about the dangers of carbon monoxide poisoning from faulty heating equipment.

"We've already had three deaths in Maine from asphyxiation," Earl Tibbetts, Division Director points out, "and we are trying to alert all campers and other small home or rural dwellers about the importance of protecting the lives of adults and children from needless disaster."

The Division is sending adhesive backed notices to all camp owners and is asking safety officials to post such notices in prominent places.

The notices, printed in red and black, and marked DANGER, say: "All types of heaters, lanterns and stoves, except electric, produce carbon monoxide as a product of combustion. All such heaters and appliances remove oxygen from the air. Therefore all such heaters and appliances can be deadly in unventilated areas."

THERE'S EVEN A LAW ABOUT CHRISTMAS TREES

If you plan to cut and ship Christmas trees this year, there are certain legal requirements that you should know about. The statute, known as the Maine Christmas Tree Law, is designed to help the Maine Forest Service and other law enforcement agencies catch Christmas tree thieves. The law could also catch those that aren't stealing, if certain requirements aren't met.

All commercial shippers of Christmas trees, boughs or tips, must be registered with the Maine Forest Service before transporting these products over a public road. A Certificate of Registration and some written proof of ownership must accompany each shipment of trees, tips or boughs. In addition, trees going outside of the New England area generally must have certification that they have been inspected and declared free of Gypsy Moth eggs. The Maine Forest Service can arrange inspection for you upon request. Trees are inspected at any stage before bundling.

In 1966, thirteen violators of the Maine Christmas Tree Law were taken to court and fined. This year, Maine Forest Rangers will stop truckloads of trees at various state exits and roving patrols will check for compliance with the law all over the state. The roving patrols will check persons cutting Christmas trees or boughs and tips to make sure that they have permission to cut from the landowner.

Registration certificates can be purchased from the Maine Forest Service in Augusta for one dollar ($1.00) or from your Town Clerk for one dollar and twenty-five cents ($1.25).

No certificate is required for transporting manufactured wreaths.

The Forest Service advises anyone in doubt about the law to write or call the Maine Forest Service in Augusta, or call the local Service Forester. If you are a commercial shipper, get a registration certificate and your other required records. If you are buying some trees, be sure that you get a bill of sale or proof of ownership. If you are stealing trees—watch out, there's a law to catch you.
